Garden of the Gods – Denver, Colorado

When we were little, my two younger brothers and I haven't always been close. We had different interests, liked different music and had different friends. As we got older, things changed. We looked forward to the times we were all able to eat dinner together after school or holiday celebrations when our whole family would come to our house. Now, we all live in different states: New York, Colorado, and Pennsylvania. It's hard to stay in touch, but we try really hard. Last year, I was able to visit my brother in his new home: Denver, Colorado. He took my mom and I to one of his favorite hiking trails, Garden of the Gods. We spent that day catching up and reminiscing about when we were young. This picture depicts our perfect day.
