

Ghanaian Pride

Theme – People

When I was a graduate student at NYU, I studied abroad in Ghana. It was an unforgettable experience. We got to visit many different schools, including this primary school. The students were so excited to see us and welcomed us with open arms. We got to take class with them, eat lunch with them and even do some African dance with them (my favorite part!). Studying abroad always changes you – you see things you never thought you would, you learn about a new culture and you meet people you will become friends with for the rest of your life. In fact, I have a Ghana reunion coming up at the beginning of October!
